When finished with the book, complete the one-pager assignment (see attached template) to demonstrate an understanding of story elements and comprehension of the book. A one-pager combines drawings, images, and words to represent a literary work.

This assignment is due the Tuesday after we return to school in August. Please have a copy printed, filled-in, finished and colored to turn in when we meet for class that day.

Once school begins, students will participate in small group discussions and activities about their selected book and take an objective quiz to check understanding of the book and its story elements. The grades from group work, quiz, and one-pager will be averaged and count as a test grade.

The one-pager assignment should include the following :

- In the border, write the title and author of book. Any white space should be filled with key words, doodles, etc.

- In the upper left corner, draw a picture or provide an image of the main character(s). Include names or character traits as well.

- In the upper right hand corner, draw a picture or use key words to describe the point of view (1st or 3rd person) of the book and label the point of view as either first or third person.

- In the middle, write an important quotation from the book and provide the page number(s) on which it appears.

- In the lower left corner, draw a picture, provide an image, and use words words to represent the setting (where and when the action takes place) of the book.

- In the lower right corner, draw a picture, provide an image, and use key words to illustrate a conflict (internal or external problem) that exists in the book.

The one-pager assignment will be graded based on the following criteria:

- All required elements are included.

- The project reflects the student's understanding of the book.

- The student's work is colorful and neat.
